Welcome Letter from Dr. Beadle

March 2, 2007

Welcome to JCU's sixth annual Celebration of Scholarship! During this week, the campus community shares in the scholarly work of teaching, discovery, integration, application and communication. These five elements are the foundation of the life of the mind as defined by Ernest Boyer in "Scholarship Reconsidered."

It is hard to believe that we began this Celebration in 2002 with about 18 featured presentations in the Atrium of the Student Center. This year we have over 50 poster presentations, many panel sessions, evening lectures, an Art Show and the Arts at Lunch, all in various locations on campus. More than 29 departments and offices are sharing their expertise. I am excited to see a dream become a reality!

In the truest sense of scholarship, we never work alone. A listing of our external research partners indicates partnerships with the Cleveland Clinic and University Hospitals. Outside research funders include the March of Dimes and the National Science Foundation. Much of this support is for student work or for faculty student collaboration.

The Mitsui Distinguished Lecture opens the week long event Monday evening at 5:30. Dr. Andrew Mertha will speak on "The Politics of H<sub>2</sub>O: Political Pluralization and Hydropower Policy in China." Wednesday evening at 7:00 pm, two lectures will be presented, one sponsored by the Office of Multicultural Affairs and the other by the Grasselli Library. Please check the website for details.

I invite you to join in the scholarships of discovery and of communication to better appreciate and applaud faculty and students for their individual and collective professional accomplishments.
