By this he indicated this: "If a human being is a human being, then he is a human being. If a human being is not a human being, then he is not a human being. If he is a human being, then he is not a human being. If he is not a human being, then he is a human being. If he is a human being, then he is not a human being. If he is not a human being, then he is a human being."

This is a paradox, a self-contradictory statement. If the statement is true, then it is false. If the statement is false, then it is true. It is a form of the liar paradox, which is a well-known example of a self-referential statement.

1. A paradox is a statement that is both true and false at the same time.
2. A paradox is a statement that, if true, contradicts itself. If false, it also contradicts itself.
3. A paradox is a statement that, when true, makes sense. When false, makes sense. When true, contradicts itself. When false, contradicts itself.

PARADOX:

- If a human being is a human being, then he is not a human being. If he is not a human being, then he is a human being.
- If a human being is not a human being, then he is a human being. If he is a human being, then he is not a human being.

Thus, the statement is paradoxical because it cannot be logically concluded whether it is true or false.
creatures. A greater world is folded in you. All the human beings, in your eyes, O human being. Do you think you are a small part of the universe? When you reflect on the universe, you will discover the immensity of the universe. At the same time, you will realize the insignificance of your own life. In other words, you will understand that your life is nothing compared to the vastness of the universe. You will begin to appreciate the beauty of your existence.

The human being is a creature of purpose and reason. We have been created in the image of the divine, and we are meant to reflect the image of God. The human being is the reflection of the divine, and this is why we have the ability to reflect on our existence and to understand the mysteries of the universe.
