Research

M^cGinn, Sheila and David Sloan

Worked with Michael Younes on translation of the Acts of Paul and Thecla. This project will be developed over the summer into presentations for the 4th international conference on “Sacred Texts and Human Contexts: Women and Gender in Religions” (July 30–August 1, 2017) and the annual meeting of the Society of Biblical Literature (November 2017).

M^cGinn, Sheila

Worked with Michael Younes, TRS GA, on editing and publication of two issues of the biblical studies journal, Conversations with the Biblical World.

Supervised students in TRS350/550 Interreligious Dialogue class in two substantial class projects, one a day-long training in interreligious leadership for high school students (I-LEAD), and the other the design of a health-care facility for Cleveland’s near West Side to address the needs of diverse religious populations in that area.

Worked with Karen Posner (2017 Lassiter Award Winner) to develop and present “The Art of Culture Shock” art contest and presentation on Native American culture and concerns in the Cleveland area.

Nietupski, Paul (TRS) & Liu, Bo (Art History)

This May and June, on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the JCU Tuohy Chair for Interreligious Studies, the Tuohy Endowment will sponsor a student-faculty research project on the Silk Road. The research team will consult with scholars at the AJCU Beijing Center and will conduct research in their disciplines in sites across China. Student researchers (Adriana Nelson, Erica Truong, Haydn Whitmyer, and Ivy Zhang) will focus on ancient and modern contexts, and consider religious, cultural, and business perspectives. On return to JCU in the fall, students will present their findings to the JCU campus community.

Philipps, Kathleen (TRS PT Faculty)

Dr. Philipps is directing students in an IRB-approved research project focusing on refugees and other immigrant populations in the Cleveland area. After researching the demographics, causes, conditions, and religious responses to the world-wide displacement of refugees and immigrants, students in TRS 231.51–52 participated in a simulation in which they designed refugee camps, taking into consideration the most vulnerable populations. A video conference with the Director of Policy for Jesuit Refugee Services brought clarity to the dire need and daunting challenges of dealing with displacement at its current scale, as well as the ethic of accompaniment and solidarity that serves as the foundation for the mission of JRS. This study and activity culminated in interviews with refugees from Bhutan, Iraq, and the Congo, who described their lives in their home countries; their decisions to flee; life in a refugee camp; and the resettlement process here in Cleveland. Based upon these interviews, students are preparing descriptive narratives, which will be collected for a larger digital project.

Tobey, Kristen

Worked with two students, Christina Perez, TRS GA, and Jenni Shelton, TRS GA, to help them turn their class papers into conference abstracts and then, when both their abstracts were accepted, into conference presentations (which they also gave during the April 2017 Celebration of Scholarship).
